

《Workers cope with sweltering heat in Beijing》

Residents in Beijing have been experiencing high temperatures over the last few days, and the mercury reached 40° on July 11. The scorching sun has turned the city into a huge sauna, and some people have opted to remain indoors. However, not everyone can stay at home – and the photos below offer a glimpse of workers carrying out their duties in the scorching heat.

Residents in Beijing have been experiencing high temperatures over the last few days, and the mercury reached 40° on July 11. The scorching sun has turned the city into a huge sauna, and some people have opted to remain indoors. However, not everyone can stay at home – and the photos below offer a glimpse of workers carrying out their duties in the scorching heat.